THE SOUTH CAROLINA-GROUGIA BOUNDARY QUES-THE SOUTH CARCLINA-GROBGIA BOUNDARY QUESTION.

The case of the State of South Carolina against the State of Georgia and the Secretary of War, which was to have been heard before the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday, was postponed until Thursday, and will then be heard by Mr. Justice Bradley. The question in the case is as to the right of Georgia to turn the channel of the Savannah river, by driving piles in its bed, which it is alleged is being done between Hutch-inson's and Argyle islands by the commander of the army in that department, but at the instance of the State. The allegation is that it is an attempt to change the channel from its original course for the purpose of affecting the boundary between the two States projudicial to the interests and rights of South Carolina. The case comes up on a motion for leave to file the bill and for a preliminary injunction to restrain the further progress of the work.

Criminal Court—Judge MacArthur.

Alfred Stone, convicted of resisting an officer, and sentenced to sixty days in jail, had his sentence remitted, and paid a fine of $25$ and was distence remitted, and paid a fine of $25$ and was distence remitted, and paid a fine of $25$ and was distence remitted, and paid a fine of $25$ and was distence remitted, and paid a fine of $25$ and was distence of Francis Luckett, by striking him in the head with a spade at Glesboro Point on the 20th of April, 1874, from which injury he died on the 19th of May. The jury accepted was Samuel V. Noyes, foreman; James Fay, Henry W. Lee, David Jackson, Philip J. Buckey, Edward F. Simpson, Samuel Queen, Ignatius G. Coombs, James A. Butler, Washington Tilley, S. John Thompson and Edward P. Welch.

Dr. George McCoy, sworn: Resides at 308 Second street; is a practicing physician; knew Francis Luckett; was his family physician. The homicide happened April 30, 1874, at 4:30 o'clock; was in attendance on the deceased; he had a very severe wound from over the left occipital ridge, extending back to the centre of the head and inward, showing the marks of the instrument that inflicted the wound. It was about four inches in length and one and a half deep at the greatest depth. It was a mortal wound, and the man lingered until the 19th of May.

Cross-examined: Both tables of the skull were broken and bent in very nearly alike. The pleces taken out came from over the carnal suter. Was called in to see Luckett at 5:30 o'clock, probably half an hour after receiving the injury. The pleces of bone were taken out on the 16th of May with instruments and ingers. He was never taken to Providence hospital; never talked rational after the injury. Had attended his family previous to that time.

By the Court: Discovered at the first visit that the bones of the skull were fractured. They could not remove the particles of bone at that time, because the parts were swollen, and there was a sequestra of water and pus to prevent it. On the 16th of Criminal Court-Judge MacArthur.

Elliot, and it was

at once, and it was done that afternoon. Did not think, if the operation had been performed earlier, that it would have saved life; came to this conclusion from the extent of the fracture. He improved immediately after the operation, and suddenly changed and sank rapidly. His bodily condition otherwise was good, and that was one reason why witness argued to let nature take its course. He became cometose on the 18th.

Dr. Christy sworn: Is a physician; saw Luckett after the injury—about three quarters of an hour afterwards. It was a severe wound in the left side of the head. The patient was almost insensible. His pulse was strong; thought if likely to prove a mortal wound.

Cross-examined: Dr. Cox sent witness a note on May 15 that he had concluded to operate, and witness was present at the operation. It was a wound of four inches long of the left parietal bone, and the skull was slightly depreaded. It was such a wound as was likely to prove fatal. Would not have been justified in performing an operation on the day the injury was received.

Mrs. Luckett, sworn: Was the wife of the decased. Did not know how long it was after he was hurt before he was brought home. The entire boat's erew came with him. He pas past speaking then, and knew nothing from that Thursday until 4 o'clock the next Saturday morning, and then his conversation was so rambling that the family seldom knew what he was talking about. Knew hered when the blow was struck. Marshall Williams, the prisoner. He was not at the house.

Frank Walker, sworn: Knew Luckett; remembered when the blow was struck. Marshall Williams, the prisoner, Luckett and witness were present. It occurred at a shanty on Giesboro' Point, between 3 and 4 o'clock; Jack Williams was sitting in the house and was talking with Marshall. He said to witness, "Do you see the old man (meaning Luckett) coming round the shore?" Witness replied, "Yes, that he was coming and pretty near to the house,"

Mr. Luckett then came in, and asked Williams what he was doing there. He said that Bill (son of the deceased) had discharged him. Luckett B. H. WARNER, Auctioneer.

Mr. Luckett then came in, and asked Williams failer's residence, sis Ninth street southeast. The friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend.

SCHREINER.—In this city, at midnight of the work, that he hired him. Williams said no; he cighty-third year of hor are. said you had better go on buck to the shore to work, that he hired him. Williams said me; he was going home. Lucket asked him twice to go back, and Williams kept refusing, saying that he was going home. Lucket said, "Well, if you are going home. Lucket said, "Well, if you are going home. go on." Williams said, "Walt a minute until 'get my clothas on." Lucket replied, "Make your minutes short." He stood there looking at Williams, who had a stocking in his hand, and did not seem to be making any hurry, and Luckett said, "Ain't you going?" Williams did not make any answer. Luckett then took a stone out of his pocket and threw it at Williams, but did not hit him. Luckett then started to run out of the room, and Williams followed him, and as he came out the door he grabbed a spade in his hand. He followed Luckett into the next room, and struck him after he got into that room, as Luckett was trying to get a door open into a third room. The door was locked, and as Luckett turned around Williams hit him over the head with the spade. The spade looked like it had been used and then got rusty. He struck Luckett with the edge. The stone was about the size of a goose egg. Luckett fell like a beef when he was struck. Cross-examined: Went down to the fishery to get fish; was in the room until the trouble commenced, and then went outside and looked in; the parties had to pass witness to get into the second room; the third was used as a closet, in which was kept guns, whisky and material for repairing the seine; never heard a word spoken by either party after the stone was thrown.

Marshall Williams, worn: Knew Luckett and the prisoner; had been on the shore a month before the latter came there; it was between 3 and 4 o'clock when he came into the house to change his clothes, and orise white are take the the the mode to change his clothes, and

THE OLD MAN SOON FOLLOWED HIM.

Witness substantiated the testimony of the previous witness in regard to the discharge. Lickett threw a stone at Williams that grazed his clothes. He said that he would not take that from a man, and started in pursuit of Luckett. He overtook him at the third door, which was locked, and while turning to witness to get the key Williams hit him in the head with the spairs. He bled like a cut hog. Witness picked Luckett up from where he had fell across a beach, and asked Williams what he was going to do about it. He got his pants and went off around the shore.

Cross-examined: Luckett threw two stones at Williams; one of them missed him and the other just grazed his coat. It was done in the first room. Witness did not speak to Williams at all.
There was no quarrel between the two.
The Government here closed, and the defense opened. The Government here closed, and the defense opened.

Dr. King, sworn: The general rule of surgery was that where there was compression of the brain the bone should be removed, or where there were external evidences of the bone being fractured and pieces penetrating inward they should be removed. It in this case the bones were broken and pressing on the brain they should have been removed. He did not know why the operation could not have been performed immediately after the injury was received. Witness had done so in some instances. There were a number of cases where men had lived after undergoing similar operations, and it was not remarkable that they should. An examination of the eyes was one of the means of denoting depression of the brain. Cross-camined: It depended whether there were symptoms of compression of the brain from an injury to the skull before it would be necessary to perform an operation. There were instances of

HE INNER TABLE OF THE BRAIN BEING BROKE rithout any apparent injury being received by without any apparent injury being received by the outer.

Wm. Luckett, sworn: Was a son of the deceased. Is engaged in fishing. At the time the fuss occurred between witness and Williams the deceased was one hundred yards away at the other end of the seine, but not within hearing distance. Witness discharged Williams because he refused to do the work that he was ordered to do. Afterwards witness told his father of the discharge of the old man. Went to the house some ten minutes afterwards, and walked at his usual gait. sual gast. Mr. John F. O'Neal, sworn: Knew Luckett.

trouble with him, and did not know anyony in the neighborhood that had. Did not consider him a dangerous man.

John E. Hewell, sworn: Knew Luckett for a number of years. With the exception of a little difficulty that witness and his partner had with him he knew nothing.

This closed the evidence for the defense, and after argument on both sides, in which the District Attorney said that it was not a case of murder, but a clear one of manslaughter, the judge delivered his charge and the jury took the case. They returned in about twenty minutes with a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, and the Court sentenced Williams to four years in the peni tentiary.
